

 RMDS AND CHARITABLE GIVING

Options for tax-efficient giving.

Every year charitable-minded Americans over age 72 face a dilemma: What to do with the mandatory taxable distribution—otherwise known as a required minimum distribution (RMD)—from their Traditional IRA account(s).

One option is to make a qualified charitable distribution (QCD) and contribute up to $100,000 directly to qualified 501(c)(3) public charities without counting the distribution as taxable income (if age 70½ or older). Thus, you can receive a tax benefit from your charitable contribution even if you do not itemize deductions.

Another option is to make a tax-deductible contribution to a donor-advised fund (DAF). While IRA distributions to DAFs are counted as taxable income, contributions also qualify for a charitable tax-deduction for itemizers. Despite this difference in tax treatment, DAFs provide an attractive way to achieve charitable giving objectives due to their flexibility and growth potential, among other advantages.

While both options provide tax advantages, the difference in tax savings can be substantial. Please consult your tax professional for guidance.

Distributions Are Tax-Deductible	No	Yes
Distributions Invested for Potential Growth	No	Yes
Charities You Can Support	Public charities (Exceptions: donor-advised funds, private foundations, or supporting organizations.)	Public charities and government entities (Exceptions: private, nonoperating foundations)

Finding the right fit: QCD versus DAF

QCDs offer a tax-efficient and simple way to satisfy your RMD while also achieving charitable-giving objectives. However, there are also advantages to routing your IRA distribution to a DAF instead for a more flexible and strategic approach to charitable giving.

Giving through a QCD offers straightforward tax savings.

A QCD is a direct distribution to a qualifying charity.

A QCD may be right for you if:

- You want to make a tax-free withdrawal.
- You know which charities you want to support immediately.
- You want the charity's check to be mailed to your address.
- You want to gift under the $100,000 QCD limit.

Giving through a DAF offers simplicity and flexibility.

Think of a DAF as a charitable account that enables you to initiate, invest, and distribute charitable gifts at your convenience.

A DAF may be right for you if:

- You want to support multiple charities with one IRA distribution and can meet the DAF contribution minimum.<sup>1</sup>
- You have long-term charitable goals, which could benefit from the potential growth offered by a DAF.
- You want to involve your family in creating a charitable legacy.
- You want to gift over the $100,000 QCD limit.
